The Bivouac of the Dead.

The following beautiful poem was written by Capt. A STONE & CO., Proprietors. O'Hars, formerly of Kentucky, but more recently of the newspaper, and read; Alabams, on the occasion of the removal to the cemetery at Frankfort of the remains of Kentucky soldiers who $2.50 fell at Baens Vists. The po m, apart from its intrinsic the 40th dragoon guards was returning and still smoking carbine.

The muffled drum's sad roll has beat The soldier's last tattoo; No more on life's parade shall meet That brave and fallen few On Fame's eternal camping ground Their silent tents are spread,

And glory guards, with solemn round The bivouse of the dead. No rumor of the foe's advance Now swe ps upon the wind, No troubled thought, at midnight haunts, Of loved ones left behind. No vision of the morrow's strife

The warrior's dreams alarms : Nor braying horn nor screaming fife At dawn shall call to arms. The shivered swords are red with rust, Their plumed heads are bowed, Their haughty banner, trailed in dust, Is now their martial shroud,

And plenteous funeral tears have washed The red stains from each brow, And the proud forms, by buttle gashed, Are freed from anguish now. The neighing troop, the flashing blade,

The bugle's stirring blast, The charge, the dreadful cannonade, The din and shout are past : No war's wild note, no glory's p. al Shall thrill with fierce delight Those breasts that never more may feel The raptures of the fight.

For, like the dreadful hurricane That sweeps the wild plateau, Flushed with the triumph set to gain, Came down the serried foe; Who heard the tempest of the fray Break o'er the field beneath. Knew well the watchword of that day

Was "Victory or death."

Long had the doubt/ul conflict raged Across the surging plain, For ne'er such fight before had waged The fiery sons of Spain ; And still the storm of battle blew, Still swelled the gory tide Not long, our stout old chieftain knew. Such odds his strength could bide.

"I'was in that hour his seem command Called to a marty,'s grave, The flower of his own beloved land, The metion's flag to save. By rivers of their father's core His first born laurels grew. Their lives for glory too!

Fall many a Northern breath had swept O'er Augostura's plain, And long the pitying sky both swept Above her mouldering slain; The raven's scream, or eagle's flight, Or shopherd's pensive lay

Alone awakes each sullen high: That flowned on that dread fray. Sons of the "dark and bloody ground," Ye should not slumber there. Where stranger steps and tongues resound Along the heedless of ; Your own proud land's heroic soil

She claims from war her richest speil-The nehes of the brave ! Now 'me all the parent turf they rest, I'ar from the gory field. Borne to a Sparian mother's breast On many a bloody shi ld. The sunshine of their native sky

Must be your fifter grave:

Smiles sadly on them here, And kindred eyes and bears watch by The soldier's sepulchie. Rest, embalmed and sainted dead, Dear as the blood ve gave !

No impious footstep here shall tread The herbage of your grave : Nor shall your glory be forget While Fame her record keeps, Our honor points the hallowed spot Where valor proudly sleeps,

You faithful herald's blazoned stone, With mournful pride shall tell. When many a vanished age hath flown, The story how ye fell, Ner wreck, nor change, nor winter's flight. Nor time's remoracless doom, Shall mar one ray of glory's light

That gilds your deathless tomb, BULLET MARKS.
